Incident Type Codes and Priorities

703.1 TYPE CODE GENERAL GUIDELINES

To determine how an incident shall be type coded, the dispatcher must ask specific questions and choose the best fit. In cases where several type codes fit the details of the incident, the one that is the most serious offense shall be chosen.

The following contains a list and description of the valid police type codes and their use. In addition to the definition, each type code section may also contain a list of supplementary information that should be obtained for the particular type of incident. The supplemental information does not replace basic question techniques used on all interrogation of callers.

703.2 INCIDENT PRIORITIES GENERAL GUIDELINES

Priority selection for call processing is critical in helping peers triage dispatching hierarchy especially when multiple incidents are pending and lack of field resources. Keep in mind these are basic rules to help serve as guidance. The priority selected should be a representation of the type code, time element of occurrence, suspect apprehension, and danger to the public.

Selecting number of officers to respond based on priority and type of incident is addressed in SOP 704 Dispatch Processing. In general, the number of units responding shall be determined by the information received.

There will be times where it is beneficial to upgrade or downgrade the priority level of response for a specific call for service, based on the facts received or other information available and/or known to staff. Dispatchers are empowered to do so as they determine appropriate and, if uncertain, are encouraged to check with the on-duty Patrol sergeant(s).

703.2.1 PRIORITY 1

A call for service that requires the immediate dispatching of units, most usually involving imminent threat to life or the possibility of bodily injury, or that involve a high level of risk to the community and where a delay in response is unacceptable.

703.2.2 PRIORITY 2

A call for service that requires dispatching of units as soon as they are available, regardless of beat assignment.These are most commonly calls involving criminal activity that are not life-threatening in nature or where the nature of the call is suspicious/unknown.

703.2.3 PRIORITY 3

A call for service that is to be handled as units become available on the respective beat and most usually involve already occurred, 'cold,' crimes with no suspects present, no immediate potential for apprehension, or no other factors present to elevate the police response.

703.2.4 PRIORITY 4

Calls not ready for assignment to police staff.

If the vehicle is in Brisbane's jurisdiction, the call taker should obtain the vehicle information and create a call for service.

703.3.2 RADIO DISPATCHER
These calls can be dispatched to either a Community Service Officer or Parking Enforcement Officer if there are no other extenuating circumstances present. Per CVC 10500, it is the originating agency's responsibility to immediately notify the reporting party of the location and condition of the recovered vehicle. The reporting party may be the person who reported the theft, the registered owner, legal owner, insurer who has paid off the vehicle claim, or a person who owns but has never registered the vehicle with the DMV.

Upon notification from outside agencies of a recovered stolen vehicle or a SMPD officer locating a stolen vehicle, SMPD dispatchers will attempt to call the reporting party any time day or night, advising their vehicle has been located, the condition of the vehicle and the locating agency name and phone number.
