POETRY CONTEST FOR KIDS

I'm in love with you, California

By Charlotte Rosario

California, oh-California,
You're the epitome of perfection.
The land for all who seek
To explore your every section.

I've felt your golden sunshine.
I tickle at your breeze.
I will follow you coast to coast,
From sugary snow to sparkling seas.

Many times, I have wandered
Journeying into your forest-green,
Or maybe let my toes wiggle
In your sandy shores, to which I'm keen.

Though your breath has once been smokey,
And your rivers dissolved to dust,
I will always boast a smile
At your forever golden lust.

Your skyscrapers kiss the stars,
But your people, down to earth.
You're a nation within a nation,
With innovation at its birth.

California, you are my sunshine,
And I am proudest as I can be.
Californians are changing the world,
And perhaps someday that'll be me.
