

Eureka!

POETRY CONTEST FOR KIDS

ODE TO LIBRARY by Brandon Liou

The library, just across the street
Surrounded by new stores and buildings seemingly making it obsolete
With a smell at times of musk and mold
The library housing stories of the future and tales of the old

Stories of knights and dragons, kings and queens
Chronicles of other worlds and ancient machines
Fables of wars and gods
Mysteries in old England and warriors fighting against all odds

Hundreds of years of history held within its walls
Biographies of many famous people in its halls
Books of science filled with knowledge and promise
And entertaining comics that may appear in newspaper columns

The library, it always gives off a feeling of home
With its long rows of shelves and halls to roam
As I enter the massive building with its soothing scent of books
I see all of the many cozy reading nooks
And I think to myself, what books should I discover today?

